Biography, September 2022

Jaimie Boyd is a partner at Deloitte Canada and serves as the firm's National Digital Government Leader. She works to accelerate digital change in the public sector, helping governments to better serve citizens using modern technologies. She previously held diverse positions in government, most recently as the Chief Digital Officer for the Government of British Columbia in Canada.

Jaimie is a frequent speaker on digital government and service modernization in the public sector. She serves on a variety of advisory boards, including for the McMaster University Master of Public Policy in Digital Society and the GovLab's Open Data Policy Lab Executive Education Program.

Jaimie is an alumnus of the Government of Canada's Accelerated Economist Training Program, Action Canada, the Institute for Technology and Society's Global Policy Fellowship and the Organization of American States' Fellowship on Open Government in the Americas. In 2019, Apolitical named her amongst the World's 100 Most Influential People in Digital Government. Find her on Twitter at @jaimieboyd.
