

Francis Careau

Francis, originally from Quebec City, is passionate about technology, politics, aviation, and cars. He started his career in unified communications, architecting major public projects. Then, he ventured into cybersecurity where he coordinated multi-million dollar projects.

Prior to oxio, Francis designed a wireless internet service provider. In 2019, he co-founded oxio and designed the first iteration of the network by himself.

Today, Francis combined his love for politics and technology. He is involved with the government and regulator to represent the interest of all competitive operators and show the value they can bring.
