

Sam Andrey is the Director of Policy & Research at the Leadership Lab, a think tank at Toronto Metropolitan University dedicated to developing new policy leaders and solutions. He has led research and policy efforts focused on closing digital divides and responsible technology governance in Canada, including a survey project to inform the City of Toronto's rollout of its digital equity efforts. Sam also teaches about public leadership and advocacy at Toronto Metropolitan University and George Brown College. He previously served as Chief of Staff to Ontario's Minister of Education, in the Ontario Public Service and in not-for-profit organizations advancing equity through education.